Instructor: Joseph Pitt  (CRN 88452)  R   12:30p-3:15p
Why Hume’s work in moral philosophy is largely ignored is a mystery. This seminar is predicated on the view that Hume’s importance as a moral philosopher needs reevaluation. Among other things, Hume was an informal mentor to and a great friend of Adam Smith. For those of us living in an economic system claiming its roots in Smith’s Wealth of Nations, and who desire to understand Smith’s work, understanding Hume on these topics is important. So that is what we are going to do: look at both their works in moral and social philosophy.
